The Periodic Review Board, by consensus, determined that continued law of war detention of the detainee remains necessary to protect against a continuing significant threat to the national security of the United States.

In making this determination, the Board considered that the detainee was a trusted member of al Qaeda who worked directly for senior members of al Qaeda, including Osama bin Laden, serving as a translator, courier, facilitator, and operative. The detainee had advanced knowledge of many al Qaeda attacks, to probably include 9/11, and progressed to financing, planning, and participating in attacks in Afghanistan against U.S. and Coalition targets. The detainee's consistent and long-standing expressions of support for violence against the United States and Coalition Forces. The detainee's failure to participate in the Periodic Review Board process prevented the Board from assessing whether he has had any change in either his mindset or current level of threat. The Board encourages the detainee to participate in the Periodic Review Board process so that the Board may consider whether he has had any change in his mindset.
