The Periodic Review Board, by consensus, determined that continued law of war detention of the detainee remains necessary to protect against a continuing significant threat to the security of the United States.

While the Board appreciates the detainee's decision to attend the hearing for the first time, his refusal to answer nearly all of the Board's questions regarding his past activities prevented the Board from assessing his claimed change of mindset. In making this determination, the Board considered the detainee's extensive and lengthy history with al-Qaeda, to include leadership roles. The board also considered the detainee's lack of a pre-determined plan for employment and support, post-release.
