The Periodic Review Board, by consensus, determined that continued law of war detention is no longer necessary to protect against a continuing significant threat to the security of the United States.

In making this determination, the Board considered the detainee's low level of training and lack of leadership role in his pre-detention activities, the detainee's compliance in detention, the support available to him from family members and multiple NGOs if transferred and the dissipation of the network of extremist associates with which he was previously involved.

The PRB recommends the following conditions that relate to the detainee's transfer: Appropriate security assurances as negotiated by and agreed to by relevant USG departments and agencies.
