The Periodic Review Board, by consensus, determined that continued law of war detention of the detainee remains necessary to protect against a continuing significant threat to the national security of the United States.

In making this determination, the Board considered that the detainee was a trusted member of al Qaeda who worked directly for senior members of al Qaeda, including Usama bin Laden, serving as a translator, courier, facilitator, and operative. The detainee had advanced knowledge of many al Qaeda attacks, to include 9/11, and progressed to financing, planning, and participating in attacks in Afghanistan against U.S. and Coalition targets. The Board also considered the detainee's consistent and long-standing expressions of support for violence against the United States and Coalition Forces.

The detainee's lack of candor when answering questions regarding pre-detention activities and beliefs prevent the Board from assessing whether he has had any change in mindset or his current level of threat. The Board was encouraged by the detainee's participation and discussion of his future plans and hopes for further candor when discussing his pre-detention activities and beliefs so that any change in mindset can be evaluated.
