The Periodic Review Board, by consensus, determined that continued law of war detention of the detainee is no longer necessary to protect against a continuing significant threat to the security of the United States.

In making this determination, the Board noted the detainee does not support a jihadist ideology, has been highly compliant, and has sought to moderate the behavior of others. Further, the Board considered the detainee's age and health problems, and the lack of clear information regarding his involvement with al-Qa'ida or the Taliban.

The PRB recommends that the detainee be transferred with appropriate security assurances and integration support, as determined by the Guantanamo Detainee Transfer Working Group.
