The Periodic Review Board, by consensus, determined continued law of war detention of the detainee is no longer necessary to protect against a continuing significant threat to the security of the United States.

In making this determination, the Board considered the detainee's low level of training, renunciation of extremist ideology, and lack of a leadership position in al-Qa'ida or the Taliban. The Board also considered the detainee's positive leadership role, generally compliant behavior, and his efforts to take advantage of educational opportunities while at Guantanamo. The Board noted the detainee's extensive family support including housing, employment opportunities, a potential marriage opportunity, and economic support.

The PRB recommends that the detainee be transferred to a country with appropriate support consistent with the detainee's stated desires, subject to appropriate security assurances as determined by the Guantanamo Detainee Transfer Working Group.
