Yasin Qasim Muhammad Ismail (YM-522) is a Yemeni who traveled to Afghanistan in 1999, received extensive combat training, and probably fought against the Northern Alliance near Bagram before his capture in 2001. During his time at Guantanamo Bay, he has been highly noncompliant with the guard force relative to other detainees; however, he has committed no violent offenses since October 2014. YM-522 probably retains extremist views and anti-US sentiment, although our insight into his mindset is constrained by his longstanding refusal to be interviewed. YM-522 had at least one relative who served as an AQAP recruiter and jihadist ideologue as well as other associates who could help him reengage in extremism if released.
